THE ART OF HOME-MAKING.

that every woman's home was bounded dren, on the east by her kitchen stove and on the west by her mother-in-law. His statement has proved itself in correct for judging from the great number of important things women have done in the last few years their outlook on the east, anyway, must have been always toward the rising sun of a new day. In the Book of Proverbs is the sketch of an ideal woman. And she is described as being a wife, a mother, and a home-maker. Her highest career is in her home, caring for her family. Her contributions to the world are the beings she moulds and sends into it. Some of the words the author says are:

"Strength and dignity are her clo-
